

PD-1042-18

In the Court of Criminal Appeals of Texas
At Austin

FILED
COURT OF CRIMINAL APPEALS
10/24/2018
DEANA WILLIAMSON, CLERK

◆
No. 01-16-00768-CR
In the Court of Appeals
For the First District of Texas
At Houston

◆
No. 1487627
In the 337th District Court
Of Harris County, Texas

◆
Ruben Lee Allen
Appellant

v.

◆
The State of Texas
Appellee

◆
State's Cross-Petition for Discretionary Review

◆
Clint Morgan
Assistant District Attorney
Harris County, Texas
State Bar No. 24071454
morgan_clinton@dao.hctx.net

500 Jefferson, Suite 600
Houston, Texas 77002
Telephone: 713 274 5826

Kim Ogg
District Attorney
Harris County, Texas

Amanda Petroff
John Wakefield
Assistant District Attorneys
Harris County, Texas

Oral Argument Requested

Statement Regarding Oral Argument

The State requests oral argument. The State's ground for review present an originalist argument for overturning several of this Court's recent cases regarding court costs. This argument is a significant departure from the approach this Court has been using on court costs, but it is true to the original meaning of the Texas Constitution's separation-of-powers provision.

Given the gravity of asking this Court to overturn its recent cases, and the novelty of applying an originalist approach to the state constitution, the State believes oral argument would aid this Court's decisional process in this case.

Identification of the Parties

Counsel for the State:

Kim Ogg, District Attorney of Harris County; Amanda Petroff & John Wakefield, Assistant District Attorney at trial;
Clint Morgan, Assistant District Attorney on appeal.

500 Jefferson, Suite 600
Houston, Texas 77002

Appellant:

Ruben Lee Allen

Trial counsel for the appellant:

William Cheadle

2308-C Avalon Place
Houston, Texas 77019

Appellate Counsel for the Appellant:

Alexander Bunin & Nicholas Mensch

1201 Franklin, 13th Floor
Houston, Texas 77002

Trial Court:

Renee Magee, presiding judge

Table of Contents

Statement Regarding Oral Argument .....	i
Identification of the Parties.....	ii
Table of Contents .....	iii
Index of Authorities .....	v
Statement of the Case .....	1
Grounds for Review .....	2
This Court should overrule Carson , Peraza , and Salinas and return to the original understanding of Article II Section I of the Texas Constitution, which did not impose limitations on the Legislature's ability to assess court costs. ....	2
Summary of the Argument .....	2
Statement of Facts .....	3
In the Court of Appeals .....	4
Argument .....	6
This Court's court-cost cases are not based on Texas law. ....	6
I. Carson gave no legal basis for its holding.....	6
II. Peraza and Salinas announced an interpretation of the Texas constitution based on out-of-state cases. ....	8
Nineteenth Century statutes show that the Texans who drafted and ratified the constitution believed it allowed the government to recoup the costs of a trial through court costs. Nothing indicates they believed money recouped this way needed to go into any particular fund.....	11
I. An originalist approach to the Texas constitution must consider the laws in place at and around the time of adoption....	11
II. At the time the constitution was adopted, the court-cost scheme sought to recoup the entire cost of prosecution from convicted defendants.....	12
III. Recouped court costs were not directed to any particular fund, and at least one cost functioned as a tax.....	15

IV. These court costs could be exorbitant by modern standards, and indigent defendants were forced to pay the costs through labor.....	17
This Court's concern with becoming a "tax gatherer" conflicts with the essential role Texas courts play in funding local government through fine collection.....	20
Conclusion .....	22
Certificate of Compliance and Service .....	23
Appendix

Allen v. State, ___ S.W.3d ___, No. 01-16-00768-CR, 2018 WL 4138965 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] August 30, 2018, pet. filed) (op. on reh'g).

Index of Authorities

Cases

Allen v. State

- ____ S.W.3d ___, No. 01-16-00768-CR, 2018 WL 4138965 (Tex. App.— Houston [1st Dist.] Aug. 30, 2018, pet. filed) ..... 1

Eldred v. Ashcroft

- 537 U.S. 186 (2003) ..... 12

Ex Parte Carson

- 159 S.W.2d 126 (Tex. Crim. App. 1942) ..... 4, 6

Ex parte Spiller

- 138 S.W. 1013 (Tex. Crim. App. 1911) ..... 19

Ex parte Taylor

- 155, S.W.2d 815 (Tex. Crim. App. 1941) ..... 19

McMahon v. State

- 17 Tex.App. 321 (1884) ..... 18

Myers v. United States

- 272 U.S. 52 (1926) ..... 12

Peraza v. State

- 457 S.W.3d 134 (Tex. App.—
Houston [1st Dist.] 2015) rev'd 467 S.W.3d 508 (Tex. Crim. App.
2015) ..... 8

Peraza v. State

- 467 S.W.3d 508 (Tex. Crim. App. 2015) ..... 4, 9, 10

Salinas v. State

- 523 S.W.3d 103 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017) ..... 4, 10

State v. Claborn

- 870 P.2d 169 (Okla. Crim. App. 1994) ..... 9

State v. Womack

- 17 Tex. 237 (1856) ..... 13

Statutes

Oliver Cromwell Hartley
Digest of the Laws of Texas (1850) .....	12, 16
TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art 1099 (1879) .....	16
TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1059 (1879) .....	16
TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1061 (1879) .....	15
TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1091 (1895) .....	15
TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1096 (1879) .....	16
TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 816 (1879) .....	19
TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 956 (1856) .....	15
TEX. LOC. GOV'T CODE § 323.023 .....	8
TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. art. 2769 (1879).....	16
TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. art. 3595(1879).....	19
TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. art. 3608 (1879).....	19
TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. art. 3739 (1895).....	19

Constitutional Provisions

TEX. CONST. art. II § 1 .....	11
TEX. CONST. OF 1845 art. II § 1.....	11
TEX. CONST. OF 1861 art. II § 1.....	11
TEX. CONST. OF 1866 art. II § 1.....	11
TEX. CONST. OF 1869 art. II § 1.....	11

Other Sources

Act of April 29, 1943, 48th Leg. R.S., ch. 192 1943 Tex. Gen. Laws 297 .....	8
Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis Consumer Price Index (Estimate) 1800-, available at https://minneapolisfed.org/community/financial-and-economic-education/cpi-calculator-information/consumer-price-index-1800 .....	17
Office of Court Administration “Annual Statistical Report of the Texas Judiciary: Fiscal Year 2017” found at http://www.txcourts.gov/media/1441398/ar-fy-17-final.pdf .....	20

Statement of the Case

The appellant was indicted for aggravated robbery. (CR 22). The indictment alleged a prior felony conviction. (CR 22). The appellant pleaded not guilty, but a jury found him guilty as charged. (4 RR 5; CR 111). The jury found the enhancement allegations true and assessed punishment at twenty-five years' confinement. (CR 121). The trial court certified the appellant's right of appeal, and the appellant filed a timely notice of appeal. (CR 127, 130).

On original submission, a panel of the First Court affirmed the appellant's conviction, but held unconstitutional Code of Criminal Procedure Article 102.011(a)(3) and (b)—which assess a court cost in the amount of $5 per witness summoned, and 29¢ per mile a peace officer travels to summon witnesses—and modified the trial court's judgment to delete part of the assessed court costs. The State filed a timely motion for en banc reconsideration. The panel withdrew the opinion and issued a new, published opinion on August 30, 2018, this time affirming the trial court's judgement in all regards. Allen v. State, ___ S.W.3d ___, No. 01-16-00768-CR, 2018 WL 4138965 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] Aug. 30, 2018, pet. filed). One justice—the author of the original opinion—dissented to the opinion on rehearing.

Id at *10 (Jennings, J., dissenting). The appellant filed a petition for discretionary review on September 24, 2018.

Grounds for Review

This Court should overrule Carson, Peraza, and Salinas and return to the original understanding of Article II Section I of the Texas Constitution, which did not impose limitations on the Legislature's ability to assess court costs.

Summary of the Argument

The First Court's opinion is a faithful interpretation of this Court's court-cost case law, but this Court's case law is without foundation in Texas law and should be overturned.

This Court's current line of court-cost cases holds that the assessment of a court cost that is not specifically directed to a criminal justice purpose violates the Texas constitution's separation-of-powers provision. At no time has this Court considered whether this line of cases is consistent with the original meaning of the Texas constitution. Instead of looking at Texas's court-cost scheme in place at and around the time the current constitution was adopted—which is the best evidence of what those Texans who framed and adopted the constitution believed it allowed—this Court has instead relied on cases from other jurisdictions interpreting the constitutions of other states.

The court-cost scheme in effect when the Texas constitution was adopted required convicted defendants to pay virtually the entire cost of their prosecution. Much of this recouped money went into the state's general fund where it could be used for any purpose. This scheme was in place for decades prior to the adoption of the current constitution, and would last until the major statutory revision of 1965.

The State believes this Court's recent focus on where court-costs are directed is not consistent with the original understanding of the Texas constitution. This focus has resulted in a tremendous amount of litigation over small sums of money, and has forced criminal lawyers and appellate courts to litigate matters of county finance for which they are poorly prepared, and which the constitution has conferred on other branches of government.

This Court should overrule its current line of court-cost cases and revert to the original understanding of the Texas constitution.

Statement of Facts

The facts of the appellant's offense are not relevant to the issues he raised on appeal or that are before this Court. It suffices to say that the appellant and two other people robbed a pharmacy at gunpoint. (4 RR 28-34, 170-75). After his conviction, he was assessed $529 in court costs, including $200 in witness summoning fees. (CR 127).

In the Court of Appeals

The appellant raised three arguments to the First Court: 1) The trial court did not acquire jurisdiction over the case because the indictment was from a grand jury associated with a different court; 2) the witness summoning fee was facially unconstitutional because it violated the Texas constitution’s separation-of-powers provision; and 3) the witness summoning fee was unconstitutional as applied to him because it deprived him of the right to compulsory process.

This petition regards only the second issue.<sup>1</sup> In analyzing this issue, the First Court believed that the determinative cases were Ex Parte Carson, 159 S.W.2d 126 (Tex. Crim. App. 1942), Peraza v. State, 467 S.W.3d 508 (Tex. Crim. App. 2015), and Salinas v. State, 523 S.W.3d 103 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017). Carson had held that only costs that were “necessary and incidental” to a criminal trial could be assessed as costs. Peraza had expanded the realm of allowable costs to include any expense that is “directly related to the recoupment of costs of judicial resources expended in connection the prosecution of criminal cases within our justice system.” In Salinas, this Court explained that whether a cost was expended for a legitimate purpose was determined by “what the governing statute says about the intended use of the funds.” See Allen, 2018 WL 4138965 at *6-7 (explaining these three cases).

---

<sup>1</sup> The appellant’s petition for discretionary review concerns both the facial challenge and the grand-jury argument.

The appellant’s argument was that the statute allowing the assessment of a witness summoning fee did not direct where the money went. Id. at *8. The First Court did not dispute this. Instead, the First Court found that the witness summoning fee was distinguishable from the cost at issue in Salinas. The witness summoning fee was a reimbursement for an expense incurred in the defendant’s trial, whereas Peraza and Salinas had dealt with court costs that funded programs unrelated to the actual trial. Id. at *9. The First Court held that Salinas’s requirement of determining where the money went did not apply to court costs, such as the witness summoning fee, that operated solely as reimbursement for direct expenses of a defendant’s trial. The First Court went so far as to hold that any court cost that is a recoupment of an expense incurred at a defendant’s trial is facially constitutional: “[T]he Legislature’s failure to require that the monies be deposited into a segregated account does not make the courts tax gatherers when the fee is directly tied to reimbursement for past judicial expenses incurred in the case.” Ibid.

Justice Jennings, filed a dissenting opinion. Id. at *11. He had been the author of the opinion on original submission. He believed that Salinas applied to all court costs, and thus the failure to specifically redirect the recouped money to a criminal justice purpose meant that the witness-summoning fee was unconstitutional. Id at *18.

Argument

This Court’s court-cost cases are not based on Texas law.

I. Carson gave no legal basis for its holding.

The first criminal case to strike down a court cost was Ex parte Carson, 159 S.W.2d 126 (Tex. Crim. App. 1942). That case addressed a $1 court cost in all criminal and civil cases in counties with eight or more district courts and three or more county courts; at the time, only Harris and Dallas Counties fell into this category. Carson, 159 S.W.2d at 127. The cost was dedicated to funding law libraries. The Carson court struck down the law on three grounds: That it was not a permissible court cost because it was “neither necessary nor incidental to the trial of a criminal case”; that it was an impermissible special and local law in violation of Article 3, Section 56 of the constitution; and that it was discriminatory because it applied to defendants in some counties but not others.

The Carson court did not state a legal basis for its holding that a cost must be “necessary” and “incidental”; the closest it came was to note that the parties had cited to “conflicting decisions in other jurisdictions on the subject of whether or not such charge can be legitimately considered to be proper ‘costs’ in the trial of a case,” but, because these decisions were “more or less based upon an arbitrary conclusion,” they were best not quoted. Ibid. Without any citation, or even specifying which states it was referring to, the Carson court “conclude[d], as several states have, that the tax imposed by the bill is not and cannot be logically considered a proper item of cost in litigation, particularly in criminal cases.” Ibid.

II. Peraza and Salinas announced an interpretation of the Texas constitution based on out-of-state cases.

Carson went mostly unnoticed for 70 years<sup>2</sup> until Peraza v. State, 457 S.W.3d 134 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2015) rev'd 467 S.W.3d 508 (Tex. Crim. App. 2015). In that case, the defendant was convicted of aggravated sexual assault of a child, and the Code of Criminal Procedure required those so convicted to pay a $250 “DNA Record Fee” as a court cost. Id. at 141. Thirty-five percent of this money went to the state highway fund, and sixty-five percent went to a criminal justice planning account.

Peraza claimed that any cost that did not meet the Carson test — necessary and incidental to a criminal trial — was actually a tax, and it violated the state constitution’s separation-of-powers provision for courts to collect it. Though Carson had not mentioned the separation-of-powers provision, the First Court agreed and held that the statute was unconstitutional on this basis. Id. at 150.

---

<sup>2</sup> In the next session after Carson was decided, the Legislature passed a statute nearly identical to that struck down in Carson, except that it applied only to civil cases, meaning this Court would have no jurisdiction to review it. See Act of April 29, 1943, 48th Leg. R.S., ch. 192, 1943 Tex. Gen. Laws 297, 297. That law has remained in effect, apparently unchallenged, funding county law libraries to this day. See TEX. LOC. GOV'T CODE § 323.023. Though Carson explicitly stated its holding did not apply to civil cases, the State can think of no reason why the stated rationales in Carson would apply only to criminal cases.

This Court granted review and determined that the Carson rule was “too limiting” for the sorts of court costs that were permissible. Peraza v. State, 467 S.W.3d 508 (Tex. Crim. App. 2015). This Court did not cite to any Texas authority but discussed several opinions from other jurisdictions, relying particularly on State v. Claborn, 870 P.2d 169 (Okla. Crim. App. 1994).

In Claborn, the Oklahoma court overturned its own prior opinion that had adopted something nearly identical to Texas’s Carson rule. Citing to cases from “other jurisdictions faced with similar issues,” the Claborn court adopted, a “more relaxed standard” for court costs. Claborn, 870 P.2d at 171. The court held that a court cost did not violate the Oklahoma constitution’s separation-of-powers provision so long as it was “reasonably related to the costs of administering the criminal justice system.”

Back in Texas, the Peraza court essentially adopted this holding:

[I]f the statute under which court costs are assessed (or an interconnected statute) provides for an allocation of such court costs to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes, then the statute allows for a constitutional application that will not render the courts tax gatherers in violation of the separation of powers clause. A criminal justice purpose is one that relates to the administration of our criminal justice system. Whether a criminal justice purpose is “legitimate” is a question to be answered on a statute-by-statute/case-by-case basis.

Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517-18 (footnotes omitted). The Peraza court looked at interconnected statutes and determined that, whatever the names of the funds, the money from the “DNA Record Fee” was actually directed to fund the collection and storage of DNA specimens, which was a legitimate criminal-justice purpose. Id. at 519-20.

Two years later in Salinas v. State, 523 S.W.3d 103 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017), this Court appended a sentence to the Peraza definition: “And the answer to [the question of whether a criminal justice purpose is legitimate] is determined by what the governing statute says about the intended use of the funds, not whether funds are actually used for a criminal justice purpose.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 107. Like Carson and Peraza, Salinas contained no historical analysis of the Texas constitution.

Nineteenth Century statutes show that the Texans who drafted and ratified the constitution believed it allowed the government to recoup the costs of a trial through court costs. Nothing indicates they believed money recouped this way needed to go into any particular fund.

I. An originalist approach to the Texas constitution must consider the laws in place at and around the time of adoption.

The current spate of court-cost litigation involves the Texas constitution's separation-of-powers provision. This provision has appeared in the same location of every Texas constitution since statehood, remaining unchanged since 1845:

The powers of the government of the State of Texas shall be divided into three distinct departments, each of which shall be confided to a separate body of magistracy; to wit: Those which are legislative to one, those which are executive to another, and those which are judicial to another; and no person, or collection of persons, being of one of these departments, shall exercise any power properly attached to either of the others, except in the instances herein expressly permitted.

TEX. CONST. art. II § 1; see TEX. CONST. OF 1845 art. II § 1; TEX. CONST. OF 1861 art. II § 1; TEX. CONST. OF 1866 art. II § 1; TEX. CONST. OF 1869 art. II § 1.<sup>3</sup>

---

<sup>3</sup> The University of Texas at Austin's Tarleton Law Library has a convenient archive of all Texas constitutions available at <https://tarltonapps.law.utexas.edu/constitutions/>.

The State believes that, when looking to give this section of the constitution the effect its drafters and ratifiers intended, it makes sense to look at the laws of that time period, as those laws are likely to reflect what the drafters and ratifiers believed the constitution allowed. Cf. Eldred v. Ashcroft, 537 U.S. 186, 213 (2003) (federal Supreme Court “has repeatedly laid down the principle that a contemporaneous legislative exposition of the Constitution when the founders of our Government and framers of our Constitution were actively participating in public affairs, acquiesced in for a long term of years, fixes the construction to be given [the Constitution's] provisions.”) (quoting Myers v. United States, 272 U.S. 52, 175 (1926)). If a statutory scheme stayed in place for decades while Texans kept re-adopting this same constitutional provision, plainly those Texans believed the statutes did not offend this constitutional provision.

II. At the time the constitution was adopted, the court-cost scheme sought to recoup the entire cost of prosecution from convicted defendants.

Both in the Republic and in the early days of statehood, most of the public servants involved in a criminal prosecution were paid on a fee basis rather than with a salary. See, e.g., Oliver Cromwell Hartley, Digest of the Laws of Texas (1850) (hereinafter “Hartley”), Art. 1358 (1848 law providing that district attorneys be paid $20 for every felony conviction, $15 for every gambling conviction, and $10 for all other convictions, “which fees shall be taxed in the bill of costs against the defendant; but in no case shall be paid by the State.”). The Congress, and, later, the Legislature passed laws requiring convicted defendants (except in capital cases) to reimburse the government for any costs it had paid during the proceedings. Hartley, Arts. 400 (1836 law requiring as much), 1371 (1848 law requiring as much). The First Congress explicitly provided for imprisonment for failure to pay these fees, unless it “appear[ed] to the court that the person so committed hath no estate or means to pay such fine and costs,” in which case the court was to discharge the defendant and the debt. Hartley, Art. 401; see State v. Womack, 17 Tex. 237, 239 (1856) (noting in passing that power of judge to order convicted misdemeanant imprisoned until $5 jury fee was paid “cannot be questioned”).

Beginning with the first codification in 1856, and running until the most recent major revision in 1965, the Code of Criminal Procedure established three categories of court costs: Those paid by the state (i.e. the state government in Austin), those paid by the county, and those paid by the defendant. As often happens, these code sections started as simple, but grew more complex as the years went on. Here, the State will discuss the version in the 1879 Code, which most closely reflects the laws at the time the current constitution was adopted. These sections were very similar to those in the 1856 Code.

The state was responsible for paying the attorney general for each affirmed appeal and habeas case, the clerk of the appellate court for each appeal, the district or county attorney for each conviction, and several fees to the sheriff related to summoning witnesses and jurors and conveying prisoners. TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. arts. 1049-1061 (1879).<sup>4</sup> The county was responsible for paying for the upkeep of prisoners, paying and supporting jurors (grand and petit), paying the county judge for any criminal cases he tried, and paying for the costs of inquests on dead bodies. TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1062-86 (1879). The defendant was responsible for paying the attorney general and clerk of the court of appeals for each affirmed or dismissed appeal, paying the prosecutor's fee, paying the district clerk for various acts (e.g., twenty-five cents for docketing the case), paying the sheriff for various acts (e.g., fifty cents for summoning a witness, and one dollar for serving an arrest warrant), paying various fees to justices of the peace, mayors, and recorders who tried criminal cases, paying a jury fee, and paying fees to witnesses ($1.50 per day of testimony and 6 cents per mile travelled to court). TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1087-1111 (1879).

---

<sup>4</sup> The code revisions of 1879, 1895, 1911, 1925, and 1948 are available from the State Law Library's website: <https://www.sll.texas.gov/library-resources/collections/historical-texas-statutes/>. The Legislative Reference Library of Texas has pdf copies of the 1856 Penal Code and Code of Criminal Procedure (i.e. "the Old Codes"): <http://www.lrl.state.tx.us/collections/oldcodes.cfm>

III. Recouped court costs were not directed to any particular fund, and at least one cost functioned as a tax.

Importantly, beginning in 1856 and running through the most recent major revision in 1965, the Code provided that, upon conviction, any fees paid by the state were to be charged against the defendant as part of the bill of costs. The Code never directed any of the recouped money to a particular fund, but instead stated merely that it be “paid by the officer collecting [the costs] into the Treasury of the State.” TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 956 (1856); see TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1061 (1879) (“shall be paid into the treasury of the state”).

Though the State Treasurer was required to keep track of the amount of revenue derived from various sources, it appears that, at least in the mid-nineteenth century, all money received into the treasury was put into a single account. See Hartley, Art. 2905 (1846 law stating treasurer must keep single account “in the name of the State of Texas, in which he shall enter the amounts of all moneys, securities, and other property in the Treasury, and which may at any time be received by him”); TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. art. 2769 (1879) (same). In the section describing how the Comptroller was to make payment on claims from officers, the Code states that the funds come out of a particular “appropriation” from the Legislature, rather than a particular fund, implying that the intake of money from court costs was not directly tied to the actual expenditures. TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1059 (1879).

Though most of the recoupment court costs went to the state, one court cost in the 1879 Code functioned as little more than a general tax for the county. For convictions in justices’, mayors’, or recorders’ courts, defendants were to pay $10 to “the attorney who represents the state.” TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1096 (1879). A later section provided, though, that in cases where that attorney “has taken no action,” the attorney would collect no fee but “a fee of five dollars shall be taxed, for the benefit of the county, instead thereof.” TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art 1099 (1879).

IV. These court costs could be exorbitant by modern standards, and indigent defendants were forced to pay the costs through labor.

If the question is “How much were those Texans who framed and ratified the current constitution willing to force convicted defendants to pay?”, the answer is: “A lot.” Nineteenth Century court costs may not have directly funded extraneous programs like counseling for abused children, but by offloading the entire expense of criminal trials onto convicted defendants, those court costs made it easier for the government to fund other matters.

The true cost of Nineteenth Century court costs is hiding in plain sight. Many of the dollar amounts of court costs have remained more less the same since 1879, but because of inflation and adjusted costs of living, the fees were, in real terms, significantly higher in the past.

The Minneapolis Federal Reserve Bank has estimates of the consumer price index going back to 1800. See Federal Reserve Bank of Minneapolis, Consumer Price Index (Estimate) 1800-, available at <https://minneapolisfed.org/community/financial-and-economic-education/cpi-calculator-information/consumer-price-index-1800> (last accessed October 15, 2018). Though it is only an estimate, converting 1879 dollars to 2018 dollars requires multiplying the former by 26.9.

Imagine a hypothetical 1879 non-homicide felony trial lasting a day, with six witnesses. The district attorney would receive $30, and the district clerk would get $10. Those fees would be paid by the state and the defendant would have to reimburse the general fund $40, or $1,076 in 2018 dollars.

But there were lots of other fees as well. If the sheriff arrested the defendant ($1), summoned a jury ($2), summoned six witnesses (50¢ each), travelled 20 miles summoning witnesses (5¢ per mile), that would be $6 for the sheriff's services. The clerk would be entitled, at a minimum, to 75¢ for issuing the writs, 15¢ for a court appearance, 25¢ for docketing the case, 50¢ for swearing the jury, 10¢ for swearing each witness (60¢ total), 25¢ for each subpoena ($1.50 total), 50¢ for entering the judgment, 10¢ for entering the indictment, and $1 for committing the defendant to jail, totaling $4.95. There would be a $5 jury fee.<sup>5</sup> The defendant would have to pay $1.50 to each witness for each day of testimony ($9) as well as 6¢ per mile they travelled (say, another $1). That is an additional $25.95, or $698.06 in 2018 dollars, meaning this one-day trial would have resulted, minimally, in inflation-adjusted court costs of $1,774.06.

---

<sup>5</sup> At the time, the law did not allow the waiver of trial by jury, thus this fee was unavoidable. See McMahon v. State, 17 Tex.App. 321, 331 (1884) (noting that defendants "can waive every right except the right of trial by jury.").

This would not have been out of the ordinary under this statutory scheme. See, e.g., Ex parte Spiller, 138 S.W. 1013, 1014 (Tex. Crim. App. 1911) (in case where punishment was 30 days' confinement, court costs were $781.21 (inflation-adjusted: $21,006.17)); Ex parte Taylor; 155, S.W.2d 815,816 (Tex. Crim. App. 1941) (in case where defendant pled to misdemeanor theft and was assessed $1 fine, court costs of $213.87 (inflation-adjusted: $3,643.05)).

Defendants who were unable to pay their court costs were held in the county jail and made to do work. In 1879, they were credited with $3 per day (or, if hired out, the amount of their earnings) if they were able to work, or $1 per day if not. TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. arts. 3595, 3608 (1879); TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 816 (1879). Apparently, this resulted in defendants spending offensively long periods in jail, for by the code revision of 1895 the Legislature had decreed that no one could be incarcerated for more than a year to pay off court costs. TEX. REV. CIV. STAT. art. 3739 (1895).

This Court’s concern with becoming a “tax gatherer” conflicts with the essential role Texas courts play in funding local government through fine collection.

In Peraza and Salinas, this Court expressed the view that the assessment of improper court costs not tied to a criminal justice purposes turned courts into “tax gatherers,” and this was improper. But this Court has never explained why that was.

Texas courts collect money for general revenue all the time: 75% of Texas court proceedings are for fine-only misdemeanors. The Office of Court Administration reports that in 2017 there were 6,659,919 Class C misdemeanors filed in Texas, dwarfing the number of jailable criminal cases (751,039) and all other cases (i.e. civil, probate, mental health, juvenile, and family) (“more than 1,415,000”).<sup>6</sup> This Court does not often see cases from municipal or justice courts, but those courts handle the lion’s share of cases, and local governments count on the revenue they raise from fines both to fund the courts themselves and to help fund other projects.

If three out of four court proceedings in Texas consist of nothing more than assessing and collecting fines for general revenue, how is it impermissible for courts to be “tax gatherers” when it comes to assessing and collecting court costs? In both instances, the amounts are determined by statute. In both instances, only defendants who are convicted pay. Does attaching two different names to the same act — making those found guilty in court pay prescribed, if variable, amounts for the harm they have caused — render one a judicial function and the other an executive function?

---

<sup>6</sup> Office of Court Administration, “Annual Statistical Report of the Texas Judiciary: Fiscal Year 2017”, found at <http://www.txcourts.gov/media/1441398/ar-fy-17-final.pdf> (last accessed October 22, 2018).

This Court’s court-cost jurisprudence stems from a certain sentiment about the role of courts in the government. As the out-of-state cases discussed in Carson and Peraza show, that sentiment is shared by a lot of courts. But that sentiment, however noble, is not an accurate reflection of the role that Texas courts have in funding local governments, nor is it grounded in the original meaning of the Texas constitution. This Court should overturn its current court-cost jurisprudence and adopt an interpretation of the Texas constitution that reflects the document its drafters and ratifiers believed they created.

Conclusion

The State asks this Court to grant review of the First Court's decision and to affirm its judgment on the basis that the Texas constitution's separation-of-powers provision does not impose stringent requirements on where court-cost money goes.

KIM OGG
District Attorney
Harris County, Texas

/s/ C.A. Morgan
CLINT MORGAN
Assistant District Attorney
Harris County, Texas
1201 Franklin, Suite 600
Houston, Texas 77002
Telephone: 713 496 2194
Texas Bar No. 24071454

Certificate of Compliance and Service

I certify that, according to Microsoft Word, the portion of this brief for which Rule of Appellate Procedure 9.4(i)(1) requires a word count contains 4,154 words.

I also certify that I have requested that efile.txcourts.gov electronically serve a copy of this brief to:

Nicholas Mensch
nicholas.mensch@pdo.hctx.net

Stacey Soule
information@spa.texas.gov

/s/ C.A. Morgan
CLINT MORGAN
Assistant District Attorney
Harris County, Texas
1201 Franklin, Suite 600
Houston, Texas 77002
Telephone: 713 496 2194
Texas Bar No. 24071454

Date: October 23, 2018

Appendix

Allen v. State, ___ S.W.3d ___, No. 01-16-00768-CR, 2018 WL 4138965 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] August 30, 2018, pet. filed) (op. on reh'g).

2018 WL 4138965

Only the Westlaw citation is currently available.

NOTICE: THIS OPINION HAS NOT BEEN RELEASED FOR PUBLICATION IN THE
PERMANENT LAW REPORTS. UNTIL RELEASED,
IT IS SUBJECT TO REVISION OR WITHDRAWAL.

Court of Appeals of Texas, Houston (1st Dist.).

Ruben Lee ALLEN, Appellant
v.
The STATE of Texas, Appellee

NO. 01-16-00768-CR

|
Opinion issued August 30, 2018

On Appeal from the 337th District Court, Harris
County, Texas, Trial Court Case No. 1487627

Attorneys and Law Firms

Nicholas Mensch, Assistant Public Defender, 1201 Franklin, 13th Floor, Houston, TX 77002, for Appellant.

Kim Ogg, District Attorney, Harris County, Texas, Clint Morgan, Assistant District Attorney, 1201 Franklin St., Suite 600, Houston, TX 77002, for Appellee.

Panel consists of Justices Jennings, Bland, and Brown.

OPINION ON REHEARING<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> The State filed a motion for en banc reconsideration of our opinion of November 28, 2017. We withdrew the earlier opinion and judgment. We issue this opinion and accompanying judgment in their stead.

Harvey Brown, Justice

*<sup>1</sup> A jury found Ruben Lee Allen guilty of the offense of aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon<sup>2</sup> and assessed punishment at 25 years' confinement. In two issues, Allen contends that the trial court lacked jurisdiction over this case and that a $200 "summoning witness/mileage" fee<sup>3</sup> assessed against him after his conviction is unconstitutional.

<sup>2</sup> See TEX. PENAL CODE § 29.03\(a\)\(2\).

<sup>3</sup> See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 102.011\(a\)\(3\), \(b\) (imposing $5 charge on defendant convicted of felony "for summoning [each] witness" and requiring defendant to pay "29 cents per mile for mileage required of an officer to perform a service ... and to return from performing that service").

We affirm.

Background

K. Rajan is a pharmacist at the BZ Pharmacy in Harris County, Texas. While he was alone in the pharmacy, three men entered the store, and one of the men pointed a firearm at him as they robbed the pharmacy of money, medications, and various items from the pharmacy safe. Fingerprints recovered during the police investigation were linked to Allen, who was later convicted of aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. The jury assessed punishment at 25 years' confinement.

In the judgment of conviction, the trial court ordered Allen to pay court costs, which included a $200 charge for "summoning witness/mileage."<sup>4</sup> He appeals.

<sup>4</sup> See id.

Jurisdiction

In his first issue, Allen argues that the trial court, the 337th District Court of Harris County, Texas, lacked jurisdiction over this case because the underlying indictment was presented to the grand jury of the 230th District Court of Harris County, Texas. The State asserts that Allen waived his complaint by not first raising this procedural matter in the trial court.

The Code of Criminal Procedure sets forth the organization and duties of a grand jury. See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. arts. 19.01–20.22. A trial court forms, impanels, and empowers a grand jury to inquire into indictable offenses, including aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon. See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 20.09 (“The grand jury shall inquire into all offenses liable to indictment of which any member may have knowledge, or of which they shall be informed by the attorney representing the State, or any other credible person.”); Ex parte Edone, 740 S.W.2d 446, 448 (Tex. Crim. App. 1987) (“Once formed and impaneled by the district judge, the grand jury shall inquire into all offenses liable to indictment” (internal quotations omitted)); Davis v. State, 519 S.W.3d 251, 254 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2017, pet. ref’d). Because a grand jury’s deliberations are secret, it retains a “separate and independent nature from the court.” Ex parte Edone, 740 S.W.2d at 448.

After hearing testimony, a grand jury then votes concerning the presentment of an indictment.<sup>5</sup> See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 20.19 (“After all the testimony which is accessible to the grand jury shall have been given in respect to any criminal accusation, the vote shall be taken as to the presentment of an indictment....”); Bourque v. State, 156 S.W.3d 675, 678 (Tex. App.—Dallas 2005, pet. ref’d) (grand jury “hears all the testimony available before voting on whether to indict the accused”).

<sup>5</sup> An indictment is “a written instrument presented to a court by a grand jury charging a person with the commission of an offense.” TEX. CONST. art. V, § 12(b); see TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 21.02 (setting out requirements of indictment).

*<sup>2</sup> If “nine grand jurors concur in finding the bill,” the State prepares the indictment and the grand jury foreman signs it and delivers it to the judge or the clerk of the court. TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. arts. 20.19–21; Bourque, 156 S.W.3d at 678. An indictment is considered “‘presented’ when it has been duly acted upon by the grand jury and received by the court.” TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 12.06; see Henderson v. State, 526 S.W.3d 818, 819 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2017, pet. ref’d). Thus, presentment occurs when an indictment is delivered to either the judge or the clerk of the court. TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 20.21; State v. Dotson, 224 S.W.3d 199, 204 (Tex. Crim. App. 2007).

The district clerk for each county “is the clerk of the court for all the district courts in that county.” Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 820 (quoting Ex parte Alexander, 861 S.W.2d 921, 922 (Tex. Crim. App. 1993), superseded by statute on other grounds as stated in Ex parte Burgess, 152 S.W.3d 123, 124 (Tex. Crim. App. 2004)). “The fact that a signed indictment features an original file stamp of the district clerk’s office is strong evidence that a returned indictment was ‘presented’ to the court clerk within the meaning of Article 20.21.” Dotson, 224 S.W.3d at 204 (because indictment “bears an original file stamp, that fact convincingly shows the presentment requirement was satisfied”). Once an indictment is presented, jurisdiction vests with the trial court. TEX. CONST. art. V, § 12(b); Dotson, 224 S.W.3d at 204.

All state district courts within the same county have jurisdiction over cases in that county, and criminal district courts have original jurisdiction over felony criminal cases in that county. See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 4.05; TEX. GOV’T CODE § 74.094; Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 820; Davis, 519 S.W.3d at 254. In counties having two or more district courts, the judges of the courts “may adopt rules governing the filing and numbering of cases, the assignment of cases for trial, and the distribution of the work of the courts as in their discretion they consider necessary or desirable for the orderly dispatch of the business of the courts.” TEX. GOV’T CODE § 24.024; see id. § 74.093 (addressing adoption of local rules of administration to provide, in part, for assignment, docketing, transfer, and hearing of all cases); Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 820; Davis, 519 S.W.3d at 255.

*<sup>3</sup> In multi-court counties, such as Harris County, a specific district court may impanel a grand jury, but it does not necessarily follow that all cases considered by that court’s grand jury are assigned to that court. See Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 820; Davis, 519 S.W.3d at 255 (“If a grand jury in one district court returns an indictment in a case, the case nevertheless may be then assigned to any district court within the same county.”); Hernandez v. State, 327 S.W.3d 200, 204 (Tex. App.—San Antonio 2010, pet. ref’d); Bourque, 156 S.W.3d at 678; Tamez v. State, 27 S.W.3d 668, 670 n.1 (Tex. App.—Waco 2000, pet. ref’d) (noting that “the judges of the Harris County district courts exercising criminal jurisdiction have adopted a procedure by which indictments are filed in each court on a rotating basis without reference to the court which empaneled the grand jury presenting the indictments”); see also Shepherd v. State, No. 01-16-00748-CR, 2017 WL 2813165, at *1 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] June 29, 2017, pet. ref’d) (mem. op., not designated for publication). In other words, one court may impanel a grand jury, and if an indictment is presented, the case may be filed in another court of competent jurisdiction within the same county.

See Aguillon v. State, No. 14-17-00002-CR, 2017 WL 3045797, at *2 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] July 18, 2017, pet. ref'd) (mem. op., not designated for publication); Cannon v. State, No. 05-13-01109-CR, 2014 WL 3056171, at *4 (Tex. App.—Dallas July 7, 2014, no pet.) (mem. op., not designated for publication); Thornton v. State, No. 05-13-00610-CR, 2014 WL 2946457, at *3 (Tex. App.—Dallas May 6, 2014, no pet.) (mem. op., not designated for publication).

The 230th and 337th District Courts are both criminal district courts in Harris County, Texas. They both share the same clerk, i.e., the Harris County District Clerk, and have original jurisdiction in felony criminal cases. On November 6, 2015, the State filed in the 337th District Court a complaint, alleging that Allen committed the offense of armed robbery. A month later, the grand jury returned a true bill of indictment concerning the same conduct. See TEX. CONST. art. V, § 12(b); TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 21.02 (setting out requirements of indictment); State v. Smith, 957 S.W.2d 163, 164–65 (Tex. App.—Austin 1997, no pet.) (describing “constitutional requisites for an indictment”). That indictment was presented to the Harris County District Clerk, as demonstrated by the clerk’s original file stamp, and filed in the 337th District Court, the trial court where the State’s complaint was originally filed. See Shepherd, 2017 WL 2813165, at *1 (“After the grand jury votes concerning presentation of an indictment, the State can file in any court that has jurisdiction over the case.”).

As additional evidence that the indictment was acted upon by the grand jury and presented to, or received by, the 337th District Court, the grand jury foreman signed the indictment, the trial court directed the State to read the indictment to Allen in open court pretrial, and it accepted Allen’s plea of “not guilty.” See Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 820 (“Logically, [defendant]’s arraignment ... could not have occurred in the 177th District Court if the trial court had not actually received the indictment.”); see also TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 12.06 (stating presentment occurs when indictment “has been duly acted upon by the grand jury and received by the court”). Thus, the 337th District Court was properly vested with jurisdiction over Allen. See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. arts. 4.05, 4.16; see also Aguillon, 2017 WL 3045797, at *2 (although amended indictment signed by foreman of grand jury impaneled by 177th District Court, 184th District Court had jurisdiction when amended indictment refiled in 184th District Court, which had “first-filed related case”); Helsley v. State, 2017 WL 931707, at *2 (Tex. App.—Amarillo 2017) (stating that when evidence of presentment appears in record, trial court has jurisdiction to try defendant for charges encompassed by indictment);

Williams v. State, No. 06-14-00224-CR, 2015 WL 4071542, at *4 (Tex. App.—Texarkana July 6, 2015, no pet.) (mem. op., not designated for publication) (although indictment was presented by grand jury impaneled by 291st District Court, case was first filed in 282nd District Court, which obtained jurisdiction); Paz v. State, No. 05-14-01127-CR, 2015 WL 6386424, at *10 (Tex. App.—Dallas Oct. 22, 2015, no pet.) (mem. op., not designated for publication) (“Jurisdiction over felony cases, such as this case, lies in the district court or criminal district court where the indictment is first filed.”).

*4 Allen argues that a grand jury impaneled by one trial court cannot present an indictment to a different trial court because a grand jury serves one particular court. However, this Court has expressly rejected this argument on at least four previous occasions. See Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 819–21 (rejecting argument 177th District Court of Harris County, Texas never acquired jurisdiction over defendant because grand jury from 182nd District Court of Harris County, Texas presented indictment); Shepherd, 2017 WL 2813165, at *1; Hernandez v. State, No. 01-15-00837-CR, 2017 WL 1416877, at *2 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] Apr. 20, 2017, pet. ref'd) (mem. op., not designated for publication) (rejecting argument that 263rd District Court of Harris County, Texas, lacked jurisdiction because grand jury of 184th District Court of Harris County, presented indictment); Davis, 519 S.W.3d at 254–56 (rejecting similar argument). We have repeatedly held that a trial court is not deprived of jurisdiction over a criminal defendant in these circumstances. See, e.g., Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 819–21; Shepherd, 2017 WL 2813165, at *1; Hernandez, 2017 WL 1416877, at *2; Davis, 519 S.W.3d at 254–56. Our sister court has likewise rejected this argument. Johnson v. State, No. 14-16-00658-CR, — S.W.3d —, —, 2018 WL 1476275, at *2 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] Mar. 27, 2018, no pet. h.); see Hines v. State, No. 05-17-00416-CR, 2017 WL 6276005, at *1 (Tex. App.—Dallas Dec. 11, 2017, no pet.) (same).

Moreover, Allen’s arguments raise a procedural issue related to his indictment. See Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 821; Shepherd, 2017 WL 2813165, at *1; Hernandez, 2017 WL 1416877, at *2; Davis, 519 S.W.3d at 254–56. Although a jurisdictional defect in an indictment may be challenged for the first time on appeal, a procedural deficiency may not. See Fingold v. Cook, 902 S.W.3d 579, 480 (Tex. App.—Hous. [1st Dist.] 1995); Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 821; Davis, 519 S.W.3d at 256; see also Mosley v. State, 172 Tex. Crim. 117, 354 S.W.2d 391, 393–94 (Tex. Crim. App. 1962); Lemasurier v. State, 91 S.W.3d 897, 899–900 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2002, pet.

ref'd) (holding defendant waived error regarding procedural deficiency with indictment by failing to timely file plea to jurisdiction). Allen did not object to the indictment or the proceedings in the trial court.

Accordingly, we hold that the trial court had jurisdiction over this case and Allen's failure to object to the indictment or the proceedings in the trial court constitutes a waiver of his right to challenge any procedural irregularity related to his indictment on appeal. See Henderson, 526 S.W.3d at 819–21; Hernandez, 2017 WL 1416877, at *2.

We overrule Allen's first issue.

“Summoning Witness/Mileage” Fee

In his second issue, Allen argues that the “summoning witness/mileage” fee assessed against him by the trial court is (1) facially unconstitutional because it violates the separation-of-powers clause of the Texas Constitution and (2) unconstitutional as applied to him because it violates his constitutional rights to compulsory process and confrontation. See U.S. CONST. amend. VI; TEX. CONST. art. I, § 10 (rights to compulsory process and confrontation), TEX. CONST. art. II, § 1 (separation of powers); see also TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1.05.

A. Reviewing a facial challenge

Whether a criminal statute is constitutional is a question of law we review de novo. Ex parte Lo, 424 S.W.3d 10, 14 (Tex. Crim. App. 2013); Maloney v. State, 294 S.W.3d 613, 626 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2009, pet. ref'd). When reviewing a statute's constitutionality, we “presume that the statute is valid and that the legislature was neither unreasonable nor arbitrary in enacting it.” Curry v. State, 186 S.W.3d 39, 42 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2005, no pet.); see Rodriguez v. State, 93 S.W.3d 60, 69 (Tex. Crim. App. 2002) (stating that appellate court addressing challenge to statute's constitutionality must presume that statute is valid and legislature has not acted unreasonably or arbitrarily); TEX. GOV'T CODE § 311.021 (noting that courts presume “compliance” with Texas and United States Constitutions). We must uphold the statute if we can apply a reasonable construction that will render it constitutional. Ely v. State, 582 S.W.2d 416, 419 (Tex. Crim. App. [Panel Op.] 1979); see Maloney, 294 S.W.3d at 626 (if statute can be interpreted in two ways, one of which sustains its validity, we apply interpretation sustaining its validity). The party challenging the statute has the burden to establish its unconstitutionality. Rodriguez, 93 S.W.3d at 69; Maloney, 294 S.W.3d at 626.

*5 “A facial challenge is an attack on the statute itself as opposed to” its application under a particular set of circumstances. Salinas v. State, 523 S.W.3d 103, 106 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017). To prevail, the party asserting a facial challenge “must establish that the statute always operates unconstitutionally in all possible circumstances.” Rosseau, 396 S.W.3d at 557; see Horhn v. State, 481 S.W.3d 363, 372 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2015, pet. ref'd). It is, therefore, “the most difficult challenge to mount successfully.” Santikos v. State, 836 S.W.2d 631, 633 (Tex. Crim. App. 1992); Toledo v. State, 519 S.W.3d 273, 279 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2017, pet. ref'd).

If a statute can be reasonably interpreted in a manner that does not offend the constitution, a reviewing court must overrule a facial challenge to the statute's constitutionality. Curry, 186 S.W.3d at 42.

We first review Allen's facial challenge to Article 102.011

B. Facial constitutionality of the “summoning witness/mileage” fee

Upon his conviction, Allen was assessed a “summoning witness/mileage” fee of $200. Allen argues that the fee violates the separation-of-powers clause of the Texas Constitution and constitutes an impermissible tax collected by the judiciary because “the funds” received for the fee are “not directed by statute to be used for a criminal justice purpose.” Instead, he argues, “the funds” are “directed towards the general revenue fund of the county ... in which the convicting court is located.”

1. Fees collected by courts as tax gatherers are unconstitutional

Article II, section 1, of the Texas Constitution provides:

The powers of the Government of the State of Texas shall be divided into three distinct departments, each of which shall be confided to a separate body of magistracy, to wit: Those which are Legislative to one; those which are Executive to another, and those which are Judicial to another; and no person, or collection of persons, being of one of these departments, shall exercise any power properly attached to either of the others, except in the instances herein expressly permitted.

TEX. CONST. art. II, § 1; see Meshell v. State, 739 S.W.2d 246, 252 (Tex. Crim. App. 1987) (observing that this clause divides Texas government into legislative, executive, and judicial branches). “This division ensures that power granted one branch may be exercised by only that branch, to the exclusion of the others.” Ex parte Lo, 424 S.W.3d at 28; see Gen. Servs. Comm’n v. Little-Tex Insulation Co., 39 S.W.3d 591, 600 (Tex. 2001) (“The separation-of-powers doctrine prohibits one branch of government from exercising a power inherently belonging to another branch.”); Meshell, 739 S.W.2d at 252 (stating that “any attempt by one department of government to interfere with the powers of another is null and void.” (internal quotations omitted)).

The separation-of-powers clause is violated “when one branch of government assumes or is delegated a power more properly attached to another branch.” Ex parte Lo, 424 S.W.3d at 28 (internal quotations omitted); see Salinas v. State, 523 S.W.3d 103, 106–07 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017). Texas courts have addressed a number of separation-of-powers challenges to statutes that require trial courts to assess various fees as court costs as part of criminal convictions. See, e.g., Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 108–10; Peraza v. State, 467 S.W.3d 508 (Tex. Crim. App. 2015); Ex Parte Carson, 143 Tex.Crim. 498, 159 S.W.2d 126 (Tex. Crim. App. 1942).

*6 A court’s assessment of fees as part of court costs in a criminal case violates the separation-of-powers clause when a court is delegated the executive branch’s power to collect taxes. Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 106–07; Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517. On the other hand, a court’s assessment is a proper judicial function when “the statute under which court costs are assessed (or an interconnected statute) provides for an allocation of such court costs to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 107, 109 n.26 (quoting Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517). In other words, a reviewing court must determine whether the fee is a disguised tax on a criminal defendant (which is unconstitutional) or a fee for a legitimate criminal justice purpose (which is constitutional). See Casas v. State, 524 S.W.3d 921, 925–27 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2017, no pet.) (“Although courts may not operate as tax gatherers, which is a function reserved to the executive branch of government, courts may collect fees in criminal cases as part of its judicial function if” the fees reflect “legitimate criminal justice purposes.”). “What constitutes a legitimate criminal justice purpose is a question to be answered on a statute-by-statute/case-by-case basis.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 107; see Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 518.

Before Peraza, which was decided in 2015, the standard in Texas was that a court cost had to be “necessary” and “incidental” to the trial of a criminal case to withstand a facial challenge to its constitutionality. See Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517. The Peraza Court noted alternative formulations of the rule in other jurisdictions, including requiring that a court cost be “reasonably related to the costs of administering the criminal justice system,” id. (discussing State v. Claborn, 870 P.2d 169 (Okla. Crim. App. 1994)), or that there “be a ‘direct relationship’ between the type of offense” underlying the conviction and the cost of court being assessed, id. (discussing State v. Young, 238 So.2d 589 (Fla. 1970)).

The Peraza Court concluded that the existing Texas standard of necessary/incidental was “too limiting” because there can be legitimate costs incurred in the administration of the criminal justice system that are beneficial to the system and worthy of recoupment even if they do not qualify as “‘necessary’ or ‘incidental’ to the trial of a criminal case.” Id. The Peraza Court rejected having a narrow requirement that the costs be “‘necessary’ and ‘incidental’ to the trial of a criminal case” because such a standard “ignores the legitimacy of costs that, although not necessary to, or an incidental expense of, the actual trial of a criminal case, may nevertheless be directly related to the recoupment of costs of judicial resources expended in connection with the prosecution of criminal cases within our criminal justice system,” given that “the prosecution of criminal cases and our criminal justice system have greatly evolved” to include advantageous processes that exceed the bare minimum of necessity. Id. at 517. Instead, the Peraza Court expanded the body of fees that could survive a facially unconstitutional challenge to include those assessed under a statute that “provides for an allocation ... to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes” in the future, untied to the specific expenses incurred in “the actual trial of a criminal case.” Id. (again, noting that legitimate criminal justice purpose is one that “relates to the administration of our criminal justice system”).

Under Peraza’s broader rule, a statute that requires a convicted defendant to pay court costs that are “to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes” in the future is constitutional even if those costs do not arise out of that particular defendant’s prosecution and have no direct relationship to that particular type of prosecution, so long as the costs are “directly related to the recoupment of costs of judicial resources expended in connection with the prosecution of criminal cases within our criminal justice system.” See id.

*7 By concluding that the Carson standard was “too limiting” and expanding the category of costs that can be properly assessed, Peraza suggests that a statute that requires a convicted defendant to reimburse the State for court costs that have already been “incurred in the administration of the criminal justice system” in that prosecution remain proper and facially valid. Id. at 517; see id. at 510 (describing that appellant’s constitutional challenge as focused on how assessed court costs “are to be disbursed”). We, therefore, interpret Peraza as holding that at least two types of fees assessed as court costs are constitutionally permissible: (1) court costs to reimburse criminal justice expenses incurred in connection with that criminal prosecution and (2) court costs to be expended in the future to off-set future criminal-justice costs. Id. at 517–18.

After Peraza, the Court issued Salinas, in which it explained that whether a future allocation relates to the administration of our criminal justice system depends on “what the governing statute says about the intended use of the funds, not whether [the] funds are actually used for a criminal justice purpose.” 523 S.W.3d at 107, 109 n.26; see Casas, 524 S.W.3d at 926. In other words, the relevant statute must direct “that the funds be used for something that is a legitimate criminal justice purpose; it is not enough that some of the funds may ultimately benefit someone who has some connection with the criminal justice system.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109 n.26.

In Salinas, the Court addressed two fees that were part of a “consolidated court cost” fee assessed by Local Government Code section 133.102. The collected fees were directed to two accounts: (1) the “comprehensive rehabilitation” account and (2) the “abused children’s counseling” account. The fees were not directly related to costs that had been incurred in that defendant’s criminal matter. Nor were they limited in their future uses to costs to be incurred for criminal justice purposes. The Court held that the two fees violated the separation-of-powers clause of the Texas Constitution. 523 S.W.3d at 105, 108–110 & n.26.

In addressing these fees, which were collected for a future use untied to that particular criminal prosecution, the Court focused on how the statute required the fees to be spent. The portion of the statute concerning the “comprehensive rehabilitation” account did not, “on its face, appear to serve a legitimate criminal justice purpose.” Id. at 108. It did not, for example, restrict rehabilitation services to “anything relating to criminal justice.” Id. Nor did the statute require that the government agency provide rehabilitation services only to crime victims. Id. Similarly, the account into which the fees were deposited was not restricted to criminal justice. The fund’s constitutionality was not saved by the fact that the physical injuries that might require rehabilitation services “could easily” be “caused by a crime.” Id. The Court concluded that the account did not qualify as an allocation of funds “to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes.” Id. at 109.<sup>6</sup>

<sup>6</sup> Since Salinas, the Court has reiterated that the “comprehensive rehabilitation” court cost is unconstitutional. See Johnson v. State, 537 S.W.3d 929 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017).

The Court held similarly with regard to the funds allocated to the “abused children’s counseling” account. Id. Monies from this account were deposited into the State’s general revenue fund. Id. at 110. The Court refused to uphold the funding’s constitutionality “on the basis of its name” given that, through legislative action, the collected fee no longer funded a counseling program for abused children and, instead, went directly to the state’s “general revenue” account. Id.

With no connection to past incurred expenses in that particular prosecution or future criminal justice expenditures, the statute imposing the fees was held to be facially unconstitutional. See id. at 109 & n.26; Toomer v. State, No. 02-16-00058-CR, 2017 WL 4413146, at *3 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth Oct. 5, 2017, no pet. h.) (mem. op.); Casas, 524 S.W.3d at 927 (because “[n]either the statute authorizing the collection of the emergency-services cost nor its attendant statutes direct the funds to be used for a legitimate, criminal-justice purpose; ... it is a tax that is facially unconstitutional”); see also Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517 (holding that, “if [a] statute under which court costs are assessed ... provides for an allocation of ... court costs to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes, then the statute allows for a constitutional application that will not render the courts tax gatherers in violation of the separation of powers”)).

powers clause").

*8 Salinas did not involve court costs directly related to the trial of that particular case. And, while Peraza expanded the category of costs that would be facially constitutional and Salinas explained the standard for concluding that a future allocation relates to the administration of our criminal justice system, neither case, individually or collectively, explicitly address whether a court cost linked to an expense incurred in the past in the criminal prosecution of the defendant and collected to reimburse the cost of actually expended judicial resources must also be specifically directed to a future use that is a criminal justice purpose. Toomer, 2017 WL 4413146, at *3–4. But that is the type of court cost being challenged here: a fee to recoup criminal justice expenses actually incurred during the prosecution of that particular criminal defendant.

Another distinguishable fee case is Hernandez v. State, No. 01-16-00755-CR, — S.W.3d —, 2017 WL 3429414 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] Aug. 10, 2017, no pet. h.) (motion for rehearing pending). In Hernandez, a panel of this court held that a $25 “district attorney fee” was unconstitutional “to the extent it allocate[d] funds to the county’s general fund because those funds allow[ed] spending for” any purpose. Id. at —, 2017 WL 3429414 at *7. The appellant argued that the $25 fee was unconstitutional because of the way it would be spent after its collection. The State, in its brief, likewise focused on the manner in which the fee would be spent in the future, arguing that “so long as the funds can be spent,” at a later time, on a legitimate criminal justice purpose, the fee does not violate Peraza.

Neither party argued—and the Hernandez opinion did not analyze—whether the fee could survive a constitutional challenge looking back to the source of the fee versus looking forward to how the collected fee might be spent, but Peraza supports such an analysis: Peraza states that court costs are “intended by the Legislature” to allow for a “recoupment of the costs of judicial resources expended in connection with the trial of the case,” id. at 517 (quoting Weir v. State, 278 S.W.3d 364, 366 (Tex. Crim. App. 2009)), and it holds that permissible “court costs should be related to the recoupment of costs of judicial resources.” Id. That language controls our analysis of the constitutionality of a “summoning witness/mileage” fee assessed to recoup out-of-pocket expenses incurred in the prosecution of the convicted defendant who was assessed the fee being challenged.

In sum, the parties in Hernandez focused solely on whether the $25 fee fell within the Peraza expansion covering fees that, “although not” involved in “the actual trial of a criminal case, may nevertheless be directly related to the recoupment of costs of judicial resources.” Because the fee here is an actual recoupment of out-of-pocket expenses incurred in this particular case, it is different from the fee in Hernandez, and Hernandez, therefore, does not direct the outcome of this fee challenge.

2. The fee challenged in this appeal

The $200 fee Allen challenges was imposed under Article 102.011, which provides as follows:

(a) A defendant convicted of a felony or a misdemeanor shall pay the following fees for services performed in the case by a peace officer: ... (3) $5 for summoning witness ... and....

(b) ... 29 cents per mile for mileage required of an officer to perform a service listed in this subsection and to return from performing that service....

TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 102.011(a)(3), (b).

3. The challenged fee is for a direct expense incurred by the State

Allen contends that the “summoning witness/mileage” fee assessed against criminal defendants, including Allen, pursuant to Texas Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.011(a)(3) and (b), is facially unconstitutional because Salinas holds that a statute that does not specifically identify a judicial purpose to which the fees are to be directed violates the separation-of-powers clause.

*9 Admittedly the statute assessing these fees, like the statute in Salinas, does not require that the fee be deposited into a specific account for future criminal justice expenses. But unlike the fee in Salinas, the “witness summoning/mileage” fee is an expense incurred by the State in the prosecution of this particular case and is unquestionably for a legitimate criminal justice purpose. See Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 107, 109 n.26. The Salinas Court refused to uphold the constitutionality of the “abused children’s counseling” fee that was not directly related to the particular criminal case on appeal from a conviction for assault of an elderly person. Id. at 105. And, unlike the “comprehensive rehabilitation” account, which did “not, on its face, appear to serve a legitimate criminal justice purpose,” this “witness summoning/mileage” fee does.

Salinas did not address reimbursement-based court costs. For this reason, we conclude that Salinas does not apply to the “witness summoning/mileage” fee.<sup>7</sup> We conclude that Peraza’s reasoning is more appropriately applied to this fee because the State is not relying on how the fee will be expended in the future, but, instead, on the recoupment of actual expenses incurred as part of this case. And Salinas does not purport to limit or modify Peraza’s focus on whether the fees are incurred as a direct result of or reasonably related to the “recoupment of costs of judicial resources,” which this fee unquestionably was. Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517.

<sup>7</sup> The Fourteenth Court of Appeals has reached a different conclusion and held the fee unconstitutional. See Johnson v. State, No. 14-16-00658-CR, — S.W.3d —, —, 2018 WL 1476275, at *4 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] Mar. 27, 2018, no pet. h.). Johnson is pending rehearing before that court.

Allen also relies on the Office of Court Administration’s website which shows that, in regard to Article 102.011(a)(3) and (b), “100% of the money” collected from the “summoning witness/mileage” fee remains “with the county or city which the [court] serves” and is directed to that county’s or city’s “General Fund.” See Office of Court Administration, Study of the Necessity of Certain Court Costs and Fees in Texas (Sept. 1, 2014), at 12, 51 in Criminal Court Costs Section (Fee No. 26, “Peace Officer Fee—Summoning a Witness”; Fee No. 118, “Peace Officer Fee—Mileage”), <http://www.txcourts.gov/media/495634/SB1908-Report-FINAL.pdf>. Id. And because the funds received from the “summoning witness/mileage” fee are “directed to the General Fund (at both the State and local level),” they “need not be spent only on law enforcement [purposes].” Id.

We are not persuaded that this report establishes that the statute imposing this fee is unconstitutional for two reasons. First, the Salinas Court emphasized the limited value of an OCA report that was not part of the record in the trial court.<sup>8</sup> Second, and more importantly, we have already held that the Legislature’s failure to require that the monies be deposited into a segregated account does not make the courts tax gatherers when the fee is directly tied to reimbursement for past judicial expenses incurred in the case.

<sup>8</sup> While the Court cited government websites in its discussion of the facial constitutionality challenge to the “abused children’s counseling” fee, it specifically stated that it was not relying on the website but referring to it because it “simply illustrates the consequences of the Legislature’s” failure to direct that the money “be used for a criminal justice purpose.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 110 n.36. Because courts in a facial constitutionality challenge must “consider the statute only as it is written, rather than how it [may operate] in practice,” it is improper for us to consider the actual use of the funds.

We conclude that Article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) are not facially unconstitutional.

C. As-applied constitutionality of fee

*10 Allen next argues that the $200 “summoning witness/mileage” fee is unconstitutional as applied to him because it violates his constitutional rights to compulsory process and confrontation. See U.S. CONST. amend. VI; TEX. CONST. art. I, § 10 (rights to compulsory process and confrontation); see also TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. art. 1.05; TEX. R. APP. P. 47.1.

In an as-applied constitutional challenge, the challenger concedes the general constitutionality of the statute but asserts that the statute is unconstitutional as applied to his particular facts and circumstances. State ex rel. Lykos v. Fine, 330 S.W.3d 904, 910 (Tex. Crim. App. 2011). To prevail on this claim, it is not sufficient to show that the statute may be unconstitutional as to others; instead, it must be unconstitutional as applied to the challenger. Id. A reviewing court must review the particular facts and circumstances of the case based on the record from the trial court. Id. Arguments based on the statute’s hypothetical application are not relevant to an as-applied challenge. London v. State, 526 S.W.3d 596, 599 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2017, pet. ref’d).

We have previously rejected the same as-applied challenge in a similar case. Id. In London, we observed that the defendant failed to identify additional witnesses he could or would have called or any reason the statute is unconstitutional as applied to him in particular. Id. The same is true here.

We overrule Allen’s second issue.

Conclusion

We affirm the judgment.

Jennings, J., dissenting.

En banc reconsideration was requested. See Tex. R. App. P. 49.7.

The en banc court has unanimously voted to deny the motion for en banc reconsideration.

En banc court consists of Chief Justice Radack and Justices Jennings, Keyes, Higley, Bland, Massengale, Brown, Lloyd, and Caughey.

appellant contends that the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee assessed against him is unconstitutional.

<sup>2</sup> See TEX. PENAL CODE ANN. § 29.03(a)(2) (Vernon 2011).

<sup>3</sup> See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 102.011(a)(3), (b) (Vernon 2018) (imposing $5 charge on criminal defendant convicted of felony “for summoning [each] witness” and requiring defendant to pay “29 cents per mile for mileage required of an officer to perform a service ... and to return from performing that service”).

*<sup>11</sup> Because the majority, on rehearing, errs in holding that appellant has not met his burden of establishing the unconstitutionality of Texas Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.011(a)(3) and (b), I respectfully dissent.

DISSENTING OPINION ON REHEARING

Terry Jennings, Justice

[O]ur clerks of court should not be made tax collectors for our state, nor should the threshold to our justice system be used as a toll booth to collect money for random programs created by the legislature.<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> State v. Lanclos, 980 So.2d 643, 651 (La. 2008) (internal quotations omitted) (holding $5.00 fee assessed against criminal defendants pursuant to Louisiana statute constituted “a tax collected by the courts, and thus a violation of the [S]eparation of [P]owers doctrine”); see also LeCroy v. Hanlon, 713 S.W.2d 335, 342 (Tex. 1986) (“If the right to obtain justice freely is to be a meaningful guarantee, it must preclude the legislature from raising general revenue through charges assessed to those who would utilize our courts.” (internal quotations omitted)).

A jury found appellant, Ruben Lee Allen, guilty of the offense of aggravated robbery with a deadly weapon.<sup>2</sup> After finding true the allegation in an enhancement paragraph that he had previously been convicted of a felony offense, the jury assessed his punishment at confinement for twenty-five years. In the judgment of conviction, the trial court ordered appellant to pay court costs, “[a]s [a]ssessed,” which included a $200 charge for “Summoning Witness/Mileage.”<sup>3</sup> In his second issue,

“Summoning Witness/Mileage” Fee

In his second issue, appellant argues that the $200 “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee assessed against him, an indigent criminal defendant, by the trial court is (1) facially unconstitutional because it violates the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution and (2) unconstitutional as applied to him because it violates his constitutional rights to compulsory process and confrontation.<sup>4</sup> See U.S. CONST. amend. VI; TEX. CONST. art. I, § 10 (rights to compulsory process and confrontation), TEX. CONST. art. II, § 1 (Separation of Powers clause); see also TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 1.05 (Vernon 2005).

<sup>4</sup> A criminal defendant may challenge the imposition of mandatory court costs for the first time on direct appeal when those costs are not imposed in open court and the judgment does not contain an itemization of the imposed court costs. See London v. State, 490 S.W.3d 503, 506–07 (Tex. Crim. App. 2016); see also Johnson v. State, 423 S.W.3d 385, 390–91 (Tex. Crim. App. 2014); Casas v. State, 524 S.W.3d 921, 925 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2017, no pet.).

We review the constitutionality of a criminal statute de novo as a question of law. Ex parte Lo, 424 S.W.3d 10, 14 (Tex. Crim. App. 2013);

613, 626 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2009, pet. ref'd). When presented with a challenge to the constitutionality of a statute, we presume that the statute is valid and the legislature did not act unreasonably or arbitrarily. Rodriguez v. State, 93 S.W.3d 60, 69 (Tex. Crim. App. 2002); Maloney, 294 S.W.3d at 626. The party challenging the statute has the burden to establish its unconstitutionality. Rodriguez, 93 S.W.3d at 69; Maloney, 294 S.W.3d at 626. We must uphold the statute if we can apply a reasonable construction that will render it constitutional. Ely v. State, 582 S.W.2d 416, 419 (Tex. Crim. App. [Panel Op.] 1979); see also Maloney, 294 S.W.3d at 626 (if statute can be interpreted in two different ways, one of which sustains its validity, we apply interpretation sustaining its validity).

“A facial challenge to a statute is the most difficult challenge to mount successfully” because it is an attack on the statute itself, rather than a particular application of it. Santikos v. State, 836 S.W.2d 631, 633 (Tex. Crim. App. 1992); Toledo v. State, 519 S.W.3d 273, 279 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2017, pet. ref'd). To prevail on a facial challenge to a statute, the challenging party must establish that no set of circumstances exists under which the statute would be constitutionally valid. State v. Rousseau, 396 S.W.3d 550, 557 (Tex. Crim. App. 2013); see also Horhn v. State, 481 S.W.3d 363, 372 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2015, pet. ref'd).

Appellant argues that the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee assessed against him, an indigent criminal defendant, by the trial court, violates the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution and constitutes an impermissible tax collected by the judiciary because “the funds” received from criminal defendants for the fee are “not directed by statute to be used for a criminal justice purpose.” Instead, “the funds” are “directed towards the general revenue fund of the county” “in which the convicting court is located.”

*12 Article II, section 1, of the Texas Constitution provides:

The powers of the Government of the State of Texas shall be divided into three distinct departments, each of which shall be confided to a separate body of magistracy, to wit: Those which are Legislative to one; those which are Executive to another, and those which are Judicial to another; and no person, or collection of persons, being of one of these departments, shall exercise any power properly attached to either of the others, except in the instances herein expressly permitted.

TEX. CONST. art. II, § 1; see also Messhell v. State, 739 S.W.2d 246, 252 (Tex. Crim. App. 1987) (“[This] single, tersely phrased paragraph, provides that the constitutional division of the government into three departments (Legislative, Executive and Judicial) shall remain intact, ‘except in the instances herein expressly permitted.’ ” (quoting TEX. CONST. art. II, § 1)). “This division ensures that [the] power granted [to] one branch may be exercised by only that branch, to the exclusion of the others.” Ex parte Lo, 424 S.W.3d at 28; see also Gen. Servs. Comm'n v. Little-Tex Insulation Co., 39 S.W.3d 591, 600 (Tex. 2001) (“The [S]eparation-of-[P]owers doctrine prohibits one branch of government from exercising a power inherently belonging to another branch.”); Messhell, 739 S.W.2d at 252 (“[A]ny attempt by one department of government to interfere with the powers of another is null and void.” (internal quotations omitted)).

The Separation of Powers clause is violated “when one branch of government assumes or is delegated a power more properly attached to another branch.” Ex parte Lo, 424 S.W.3d at 28 (internal quotations omitted); see also Salinas v. State, 523 S.W.3d 103, 106–07 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017). A court is delegated a power more properly attached to the executive branch, rather than to the judiciary, where a statute turns the court into a “tax gatherer[ ].” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 107, 109 n.26 (quoting Peraza v. State, 467 S.W.3d 508, 517 (Tex. Crim. App. 2015)) (explaining “[t]he issue is whether the fee in question is a court cost (which is allowed) or a tax (which is unconstitutional)”).

However, the collection of fees by a court in a criminal case constitutes a judicial function, and thus does not violate the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution, where a “statute under which [a] court cost[ ] [is] assessed (or an interconnected statute) provides for an allocation of such [a] court cost[ ] to be expended for [a] legitimate criminal justice purpose[ ].” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 107, 109 n.26 (quoting Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517); see also Casas v. State, 524 S.W.3d 921, 925–27 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth 2017, no pet.) (“Although courts may not operate as tax gatherers, which is a function reserved to the executive branch of government, courts may collect fees in criminal cases as part of [their] judicial function if the statute under which [the] court costs are assessed (or an interconnected statute) provides for an allocation of such [court] costs to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes.” (internal quotations omitted)).

*13 “What constitutes a legitimate criminal justice purpose is a question to be answered on a statute-by-statute/case-by-case basis.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 107; see also Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 518. “And the answer to that question is determined by what [a] governing statute says about the intended use of the funds [collected from criminal defendants], not whether [the] funds are actually used for a criminal justice purpose.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 107, 109 n.26; see also Casas, 524 S.W.3d at 926. In other words, in order to not run afoul of the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution, a statute that imposes a court cost on a criminal defendant must direct “that the funds [collected pursuant to that statute] be used for something that is a legitimate criminal justice purpose; it is not enough that some of the funds may ultimately benefit someone who has some connection with the criminal justice system.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109 n.26.

As the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals has noted, “[w]hen a defendant is convicted in a criminal case, various statutes require [him to] pay[ ] [certain] fees as court costs.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 105; see also Johnson v. State, 423 S.W.3d 385, 389 (Tex. Crim. App. 2014) (“Only statutorily authorized court costs may be assessed against a criminal defendant...”). Relevant to the instant case, article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) require a defendant “convicted of a felony or misdemeanor” to pay fees for certain services “performed ... by a peace officer,” including “$5 for summoning [each] witness” and “29 cents per mile for mileage required of an officer to perform [the] service ... and to return from performing that service.” TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 102.011(a)(3), (b) (Vernon 2018).

In Salinas, the court of criminal appeals held that Local Government Code section 133.102, which requires a person convicted of a criminal offense to pay a “Consolidated Court Cost” fee,<sup>5</sup> violates the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution to the extent that it allocates funds received from criminal defendants to the “abused children’s counseling” account.<sup>6</sup> 523 S.W.3d at 105, 109–110, 109 n.26 (internal quotations omitted). In doing so, the court explained that the funds received from criminal defendants for the “Consolidated Court Cost” fee that are allocated to the “abused children’s counseling” account are actually “deposited in the [State’s] General Revenue Fund.” Id. at 110 (internal quotations omitted). Accordingly, the court concluded:

We cannot uphold the constitutionality of funding [the “abused children’s counseling”] account through court costs on the basis of its name or its former use when all the funds in the account go to general revenue. Consequently, the allocation of funds to the “abused children’s counseling” account does not currently qualify as an allocation of funds “to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes.” To the extent that § 133.102 allocates funds to the “abused children’s counseling” account, it is facially unconstitutional in violation of the Separation of Powers provision of the Texas Constitution.

Id. at 110 (emphasis added).

<sup>5</sup> See TEX. LOCAL GOV’T CODE ANN. § 133.102(a) (Vernon Supp. 2017) (“A person convicted of an offense shall pay as a court cost, in addition to all other costs: (1) $133 on conviction of a felony; (2) $83 on conviction of a Class A or B misdemeanor; or (3) $40 on conviction of a nonjailable misdemeanor offense, including a criminal violation of a municipal ordinance, other than a conviction of an offense relating to a pedestrian or the parking of a motor vehicle.”); see also Salinas v. State, 523 S.W.3d 103, 105 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017) (under Local Government Code section 133.102, “[a] defendant pays a single fee, but the money from that fee is divided up among a variety of different state government accounts according to percentages dictated by the statute”).

<sup>6</sup> The court also held that Local Government Code section 133.102 is unconstitutional, in violation of the Separation of Powers clause, to the extent that it allocates funds received from criminal defendants to the “[c]omprehensive [r]ehabilitation” account because such funds serve “[n]o criminal justice purpose.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 105, 107–09 (internal quotations omitted). Since Salinas, the court of criminal appeals has repeatedly held that the portions of the “Consolidated Court Cost” fee that allocate funds received for the fee to the “abused children’s counsel” account and the “comprehensive rehabilitation” account are unconstitutional. See, e.g., Carter v. State, No. PD-1449-16, 2018 WL 1101310, at *1–2 (Tex. Crim. App. Feb. 28, 2018); Amie v. State, Nos. PD-0253-16, PD-0254-16, 2017 WL 5476352, at *1 (Tex. Crim. App. Nov. 15, 2017); Johnson v. State, 537 S.W.3d 929, 929–30 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017); Davis v. State, No. PD-1314-15, 2017 WL 4410265, at *1 (Tex. Crim. App. Oct. 4, 2017); Guerrero v. State, Nos. PD-0665-15, PD-0666-15, 2017 WL 4410256, at *1 (Tex. Crim. App. Oct. 4, 2017); Penright v. State, 537 S.W.3d 916, 916–17 (Tex. Crim. App. 2017); see also Act of May 18, 2017, 85th Leg., R.S., ch. 966, § 1, 2017 Tex. Sess. Law Serv. 3917 (amending Local Government Code section 133.102 to remove the “abused children’s counseling” account and “comprehensive rehabilitation” account identified by the court of criminal appeals as unconstitutional).

*14 Essentially, the court of criminal appeals, in Salinas, explained that there are “limits” to the types of fees that the legislature “c[an] require the courts to collect” and “it [was simply] not enough that some of the funds [collected pursuant to the ‘Consolidated Court Cost’ fee] may ultimately benefit someone who has some connection with the criminal justice system.” Id. at 109 n.26. Instead, the court held that where a statute fails “to direct the funds [collected from criminal defendants] to be used in a manner that would make it a court cost (i.e., for something that is a criminal justice purpose), th[at] statute operates unconstitutionally every time the fee is collected, making the statute unconstitutional on its face.” Id. at 109 n.26, 110 n.36 (“The fee is unconstitutional because the funds are not directed by statute to be used for a criminal justice purpose.”).

This Court, relying on the court of criminal appeals’ decision in Salinas, has since addressed the issue of whether the $25 “[P]rosecutor’s fee” assessed against a criminal defendant, pursuant to Texas Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.008(a), is facially unconstitutional because it violates the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution. See Hernandez v. State, No. 01-16-000755-CR, — S.W.3d —, — — —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *6–7 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] Aug. 10, 2017, no pet. h.).<sup>7</sup> In doing so, we noted that article 102.008(a) requires “a defendant convicted of a misdemeanor” to pay “a fee of $25 for the trying of [his] case by the district or county attorney.” Id. at —, 2017 WL 3429414 at *6 (quoting TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 102.008(a) (Vernon 2018)). However, article 102.008(a) “does not [actually] state where the [funds received from criminal defendants for the] $25 [‘Prosecutor’s] fee[’] [are] to be directed.” Id.; see TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 102.008(a).

<sup>7</sup> This case is currently before the Court on rehearing.

Instead, we noted that the Office of Court Administration’s website shows that “100% of the money collected” for the “[P]rosecutor’s fee” remains “with the [c]ounty (or the [c]ity),” which the court serves and “is directed to th[at] [c]ounty’s (or [c]ity’s) General Fund.” Hernandez, — S.W.3d at —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *6 (quoting Office of Court Administration, Study of the Necessity of Certain Court Costs and Fees in Texas (Sept. 1, 2014), at 6–7 in Criminal Court Costs Section (Fee No. 13, “Prosecutor’s Fee”), <http://www.txcourts.gov/media/495634/SB1908-Report-FINAL.pdf> (purpose of study, ordered by Senate Bill 1908, to “identif[y] each statutory law imposing a court fee or cost in a court in this state” and “[d]etermine whether each identified fee or cost is necessary to accomplish the stated statutory purpose”) );<sup>8</sup> see also Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 110 (noting, based on Texas Comptroller’s website, funds collected pursuant to Local Government Code section 133.102 for “abused children’s counseling” account “deposited in the [State’s] General Revenue Fund”). And “[m]oney in a county’s [or city’s] general fund can be spent for ‘any proper county [or city] purpose.’ ” Hernandez, — S.W.3d at —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *6 (quoting Tex. Att’y Gen. Op. No. JM-530 (1986)).

<sup>8</sup> The study conducted by the Office of Court Administration identified several concerns, including the fact that “some fees and costs [ordered to be collected from criminal defendants] have no stated statutory purpose,” “court fees and costs collected from [criminal defendants] are oftentimes used to fund programs outside of and unrelated to the judiciary,” and “many court fees and costs are collected for a purpose but [are] not dedicated or restricted to be used exclusively for that intended purpose.” See Office of Court Administration, Study of the Necessity of Certain Court Costs and Fees in Texas (Sept. 1, 2014), at 2, <http://www.txcourts.gov/media/495634/SB1908-Report-FINAL.pdf>.

*15 Thus, relying on Salinas, we explained that “the constitutional infirmity” in Hernandez was that article 102.008(a) did not “direct the funds [collected from criminal defendants for the ‘[P]rosecutor’s fee’] to be used in a manner that would make it a court cost (i.e., for something that is a criminal justice purpose).”<sup>9</sup> Id. at *7 (quoting Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109 n.26); see also Johnson v. State, No. 14-16-00658-CR, — S.W.3d —, — — —, 2018 WL 1476275, at *4–5 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] Mar. 27, 2018, no pet. h.) (Texas Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.004, imposing $40 fee on criminal defendant convicted by jury, “on its face[,] violates [S]eparation-of-[P]owers provision because the statute does not direct that the funds collected be expended for something that is a legitimate criminal-justice purpose”). And we concluded that article 102.008(a) “operates unconstitutionally every time the [‘Prosecutor’s] fee[’] is collected,” making the statute unconstitutional on its face. Hernandez, — S.W.3d at —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *7 (quoting Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109 n.26). Further, we noted that although “some of the money collected” for the “[P]rosecutor’s fee” “may ultimately be spent on something that would be a legitimate criminal justice purpose,” this “is not sufficient to create a constitutional application of the statute because the actual spending of the money is not what makes a fee a court cost.” Id. (quoting Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109 n.26).

<sup>9</sup> The State, in its motion for rehearing in Hernandez, concedes that article 102.008(a) does not contain language directing the funds collected from criminal defendants for the “[P]rosecutor’s fee” to be expended for any legitimate criminal justice purpose.

Accordingly, we held that because article 102.008(a) does not direct that the funds received from criminal defendants for the $25 “[P]rosecutor’s fee” be expended for a criminal justice purpose, the statute is unconstitutional in violation of the Separation of Powers clause, as “it allocates [the] funds [collected] to the ... general fund” of the county that the court serves and allows such funds to be spent “for purposes other than legitimate criminal justice purposes.” Id.; see also Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109–10 (“We cannot uphold the constitutionality of funding th[e] ‘abused children’s counseling’ account ... when all the funds in the account go to [the State’s] general revenue [fund].”); Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 518 n.17 (agreeing “court costs should [generally] relate to the recoupment of judicial resources”); Johnson, — S.W.3d ——, 2018 WL 1476275, at *4–5 (holding Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.004 unconstitutional, in violation of Separation of Powers clause, where it “fail[ed] to direct the funds collected to be used for something that is a legitimate criminal-justice purpose”); Toomer v. State, No. 02-16-00058-CR, 2017 WL 4413146, at *3 (Tex. App.—Fort Worth Oct. 5, 2017, pet. ref’d) (holding Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.0185 unconstitutional, in violation of Separation of Powers clause, because “[n]either the statute authorizing the collection of the emergency-services costs nor its attendant statutes direct the funds to be used for a legitimate, criminal-justice purpose”); Casas, 524 S.W.3d at 925–27 (holding Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.0185 unconstitutional, in violation of Separation of Powers clause, and noting “monies collected” from “emergency-services cost” allocated to general revenue fund); Tex. Att’y Gen. Op. No. JC-0158 (1999) (“Court fees that are used for general purposes are characterized as taxes, and a tax imposed on a litigant ... violat[es] ... the constitution.”). Accordingly, we modified the trial court’s judgment to delete the $25 “[P]rosecutor’s fee” from the costs assessed against the criminal defendant. Hernandez, — S.W.3d at —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *7.

Surprisingly, here, the majority concludes, unlike we did in Hernandez, that Salinas and its progeny are irrelevant to the instant case. And now, on rehearing, the majority strains to distinguish both Hernandez and Salinas<sup>10</sup> so that it may hold that Texas Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) are not facially unconstitutional.<sup>11</sup> In doing so, the majority misinterprets the court of criminal appeals’ decision in Peraza, which pre-dates Salinas, and fails to apply the correct legal standard pronounced in Salinas to the instant case.

<sup>10</sup> While the majority takes great pains to distinguish these cases and reconcile its opinion on rehearing with their controlling nature, I am not persuaded and “cannot join the [laborious effort] in which the majority engages by forcing a square peg into a round hole.” See Saunders v. Lee, 180 S.W.3d 742, 746 (Tex. App.—Waco 2005, no pet.) (Gray, C.J., dissenting).

<sup>11</sup> It is imperative to remember that when the legislature oversteps its bounds and passes a statute that violates the Texas Constitution, there is no shame in a court saying so. See LeCroy, 713 S.W.2d at 339 (courts have “the power and duty to protect the ... guaranteed rights of all Texans” and “[b]y enforcing [the] constitution, [courts] provide Texans with their full individual rights”). As Justice Franklin Spears has explained:

[The legislature may not] force the judiciary into the role of a subordinate and supplicant governmental service—in effect, a mere agency. The judiciary is not an agency, but is a constitutionally established separate, equal and independent branch of government.

.... The judicial power provides a check on the abuse of authority by other governmental branches. If the courts are to provide that check, they cannot be subservient to the other branches of government but must ferociously shield their ability to judge independently and fairly. This is the essence of our very existence; we owe the people of Texas no less than our unflinching insistence on a true tripartite government. It is the responsibility of this court to preserve this constitutional framework.

.... The judiciary may often be denominated as the “third” branch of government, but that does not mean it is third in importance; it is in reality one of three equal branches. As such, the judiciary is an integral part of our government and cannot be impeded in its function....

Mays v. Fifth Court of Appeals, 755 S.W.2d 78, 80–81 (Tex. 1988) (Spears, J., concurring) (internal footnotes and quotations omitted).

*<sup>16</sup> In Peraza, the Texas Court of Criminal Appeals addressed whether a $250 “DNA record fee” assessed against a criminal defendant pursuant to Texas Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.020 was “an unconstitutional tax that violate[d] the [S]eparation of [P]owers clause under the Texas Constitution.”

S.W.3d at 510–12. In its opinion, the court of criminal appeals explained that “court costs should be related to the recoupment of costs of judicial resources … expended in connection with the prosecution of criminal cases within [the] criminal justice system.” Id. at 517. And the court held that in order to determine whether a court cost assessed against a criminal defendant runs afoul of the Separation of Powers clause, the question is not whether “such costs [are] ‘necessary’ and ‘incidental’ to the trial of a criminal case,” but rather whether a “statute under which [a] court cost[ ] [is] assessed (or an interconnected statute) provides for an allocation of such [a] court cost[ ] to be expended for [a] legitimate criminal justice purpose[ ].” Id. at 517–18. “A criminal justice purpose is one that relates to the administration of our criminal justice system,” and “[w]hether a criminal justice purpose is ‘legitimate’ is a question to be answered on a statute-by-statute/case-by-case basis.” Id.

Utilizing the above standard, the court of criminal appeals, in Peraza, went on to hold that the criminal defendant in that case had not met his burden of establishing that Texas Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.020, which imposes the “DNA record fee,” could not operate constitutionally under any circumstance. Id. at 521. Thus, the court held that article 102.020 was not facially unconstitutional in violation of the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution.<sup>12</sup> Id.

<sup>12</sup> Certainly, what the court of criminal appeals did not do in Peraza was hold, as the majority now concludes, that under the Separation of Powers clause “at least two types of fees assessed as court costs are constitutionally permissible: (1) court costs to reimburse criminal justice expenses incurred in connection with that criminal prosecutions and (2) court costs to be expended in the future to off-set future criminal-justice costs.”

Following Peraza, the court of criminal appeals in Salinas, as previously discussed, addressed the constitutionality, under the Separation of Powers clause, of Local Government Code section 133.102, which assesses a $133 “Consolidated Court Cost” fee against criminal defendants. 523 S.W.3d at 105–10, 113. There, the court looked at whether “some of the funds [received] from the [‘C]onsolidated [Court Cost]’ fee [were] statutorily apportioned to accounts[, namely, the ‘comprehensive rehabilitation’ account and the ‘abused children’s counseling’ account] that d[id] not serve legitimate criminal justice purposes.” Id. at 105–07 (noting “[t]he question here is whether the two accounts at issue (‘abused children’s counseling’ and ‘comprehensive rehabilitation’) meet the requirement that the relevant statutes provide for the allocation of funds ‘to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes’ ”). The court ultimately concluded that the funds collected from criminal defendants and allocated to the “comprehensive rehabilitation” account and the “abused children’s counseling” account did not qualify as funds to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes; and, thus, the court held that, to the extent that Local Government Code section 133.102 allocates funds to those accounts, the statute is facially unconstitutional. Id. at 106–10, 113. Notably, in doing so, the court twice emphasized, using broad language, that section 133.102 was unconstitutional because the statute “fail[ed] to direct the funds to be used in a manner that would make it a court cost (i.e., for something that is a criminal-justice purpose).” Id. at 109 n.26, 110 n.36 (emphasis added).

Although the majority, here, would like to assert that Salinas is different from the instant case, it, by doing so, fails to recognize the court of criminal appeals’ use of broad language in Salinas and the fact that the court did not limit its holding to the circumstances of that case. See id. 106–10, 109 n.26, 110 n.36; see also Johnson, — S.W.3d —, 2018 WL 1476275, at *4 (recognizing “broad language” employed by Salinas court and applying Salinas legal standard to “statute [that] is silent as to the allocation of the court costs collected” from criminal defendants). Instead, what is clear after the court of criminal appeals’ decision in Salinas is that our Court must apply the legal standard utilized in that case (as well as Peraza) to appeals involving facial constitutional challenges to court-cost statutes based on violations of the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution. See State ex rel. Vance v. Clawson, 465 S.W.2d 164, 168 (Tex. Crim. App. 1971) (“The Court of Criminal Appeals is the court of last resort in this state in criminal matters. This being so, no other court of this state has authority to overrule or circumvent its decisions, or disobey its mandates.” (internal quotations omitted)); Johnson, — S.W.3d —, 2018 WL 1476275, at *4 (“[T]he Salinas decision requires us to apply the legal standard in that case to all facial challenges based on the [S]eparation-of-[P]owers provision to court-cost statutes.”); Cervantes-Guerrero v. State, 532 S.W.3d 827, 832 (Tex. App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 2017, no pet.) (when court of criminal appeals “has deliberately and unequivocally interpreted the law in a criminal matter, [the courts of appeals] must adhere to its interpretation”). Thus, after Salinas, to avoid being declared facially unconstitutional, in violation of the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution, a statute that imposes a court cost on a criminal defendant must direct “that the funds [collected pursuant to that statute] be used for something that is a legitimate criminal justice purpose.”

Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109 n.26, 110 n.36; see also Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517–18 (“[I]f [a] statute under which court costs are assessed ... provides for an allocation of ... court costs to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes, then the statute allows for a constitutional application that will not render the courts tax gatherers in violation of the [S]eparation of [P]owers clause.” (internal footnote omitted) ). This the legal standard to be applied in the instant case.

*17 Turning back to this case, the Court has been asked to determine whether the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee assessed against criminal defendants, including appellant, pursuant to Texas Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.011(a)(3) and (b), is facially unconstitutional because it violates the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution. See TEX. CONST. art. II, § 1. Article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) require a defendant “convicted of a felony or misdemeanor” to pay fees for certain services “performed ... by a peace officer,” including “$5 for summoning [each] witness” and “29 cents per mile for mileage required of an officer to perform [the] service ... and to return from performing that service.” See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 102.011(a)(3), (b). However, the statute does not actually state where the funds received from criminal defendants for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee are to be directed. See id.; see also Tex Att'y Gen. Op. No. JC-0031 (1999) (noting “[a] myriad of statutes authorize district clerks to collect court fees in criminal and civil cases” and “[s]ome of these statutes earmark court fees for deposit in specific state or county accounts,” while “others are silent with respect to this issue” (emphasis added) (internal footnotes omitted) ). Under such circumstances, the funds collected pursuant to article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) end up in the general fund of the county in which the convicting court serves or the general fund of the State. Cf. Johnson, — S.W.3d —, 2018 WL 1476275, at *4 (Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.004, imposing $40 fee on criminal defendant convicted by jury, does not allocate jury fee to any specific fund; and, under such circumstances, defendant and State agreed funds collected were deposited in general fund); Hernandez, — S.W.3d at — — —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *6–7 (funds collected from criminal defendants pursuant to Code of Criminal Procedure 102.008(a), which is silent as to where such funds are directed, deposited in general fund of county or city court serves); see also Tex Att'y Gen. Op. No. JC-0031 (if fee provision is silent with respect to fee’s proper disposition and fee is for official service performed by district clerk, then funds must be deposited in county treasury).

In fact, the Office of Court Administration’s website even notes, in regard to article 102.011(a)(3) and (b), that “100% of the money” collected for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee, including appellant’s money, remains “with the county or city which the [c]ourt serves” and is directed to that county’s or city’s “General Fund.” See Office of Court Administration, Study of the Necessity of Certain Court Costs and Fees in Texas (Sept. 1, 2014), at 12, 51 in Criminal Court Costs Section (Fee No. 26, “Peace Officer Fee—Summoning a Witness”; Fee No. 118, “Peace Officer Fee—Mileage”), <http://www.txcourts.gov/media/495634/SB1908-Report-FINAL.pdf>; see also Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 110 & n.36 (noting “[t]he [Texas] Comptroller’s website says that the money collected for [the] [‘]abused children’s counseling[’] [account] is deposited in the General Revenue Fund”); Hernandez, — S.W.3d at — — —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *6. Further, the Office of Court Administration’s website explains that if a “peace officer” is employed by the State then “the [c]ity or [c]ounty,” which the court serves, “keeps 80% of the [‘Summoning Witness/Mileage’] fee,” which is then “direct[ed] ... to the [c]ounty’s (or [c]ity’s) General Fund,” while “[t]he [remaining] 20% of the money [collected for the ‘Summoning Witness/Mileage’ fee] is sent to the State for deposit in the State’s General Revenue Fund.”<sup>13</sup> See Office of Court Administration, Study of the Necessity of Certain Court Costs and Fees in Texas (Sept. 1, 2014), at 12, 51 in Criminal Court Costs Section (Fee No. 26, “Peace Officer Fee—Summoning a Witness”; Fee No. 118, “Peace Officer Fee—Mileage”), <http://www.txcourts.gov/media/495634/SB1908-Report-FINAL.pdf>; see also Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 110 & n.36. And because the funds received for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee are “directed to the General Fund (at both the State and local level),” they “need not be spent only on law enforcement [purposes].” See Office of Court Administration, Study of the Necessity of Certain Court Costs and Fees in Texas (Sept. 1, 2014), at 12, 51 in Criminal Court Costs Section (Fee No. 26, “Peace Officer Fee—Summoning a Witness”; Fee No. 118, “Peace Officer Fee—Mileage”), <http://www.txcourts.gov/media/495634/SB1908-Report-FINAL.pdf>; see also Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 110 & n.36 (noting “[t]he [Texas] Comptroller’s website says that the money collected for [the] [‘]abused children’s counseling[’] [account] is deposited in the General Revenue Fund”); Hernandez, — S.W.3d at — — —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *6 (holding Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.008(a) unconstitutional, in violation of Separation of Powers clause, because “it allocates funds to the county’s general fund” and those funds spent “for purposes other than legitimate criminal justice purposes”); Casas, 524 S.W.3d at 925–27 (Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.0185 unconstitutional, in violation of Separation of Powers clause, where funds collected from “emergency-services cost” allocated to general revenue fund); Tex. Att'y Gen. Op. No. JC-0158 (“Court fees that are used for general purposes are characterized as taxes, and a tax imposed on a litigant ... violat[es] ... the constitution.”); Tex. Att'y Gen. Op. No. JM-530 (money in county’s general fund may be spent on “any proper county purpose”).

<sup>13</sup> Although the majority concludes that the Office of Court Administration’s website has “limited value,” the majority does not assert that the information from the website is inaccurate. Cf. Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 110 n.36. Further, article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) are not facially unconstitutional because of the information contained on the Office of Court Administration’s website. Instead, as explained above, in order to pass muster under the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution, article 102.011(a)(3) and (b), or an interconnected statute, must direct that the funds collected from criminal defendants for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee be expended for something that constitutes a legitimate criminal justice purpose. Here, the statute simply does not do that; it does not state where the funds collected for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee are to be directed. Accordingly, the funds collected pursuant to article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) are deposited in the county’s general fund or the State’s general fund to be used for any legal purpose. This is what renders the statute unconstitutional.

*18 Thus, in this case, as in Salinas, “the constitutional infirmity” is that article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) do not direct the funds collected from criminal defendants for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee to be used in a manner that would make them a court cost (i.e., for something that is a legitimate criminal justice purpose).<sup>14</sup> See 523 S.W.3d at 109 n.26, 110 n.36; see also Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517–18 (“[I]f [a] statute under which court costs are assessed ... provides for an allocation of ... court costs to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes, then the statute allows for a constitutional application that will not render the courts tax gatherers in violation of the [S]eparation of [P]owers clause.”) (internal footnote omitted); Johnson, — S.W.3d — — —, 2018 WL 1476275, at *4–5 (“Under Salinas, article 102.004(a)’s failure to direct the funds collected to be used for something that is a legitimate criminal-justice purpose makes the statute facially unconstitutional, in violation of article II, section I of the Texas Constitution.”); Toomer, 2017 WL 4413146, at *3; Hernandez, — S.W.3d at — — —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *7; Casas, 524 S.W.3d at 927 (because “[n]either the statute authorizing the collection of the emergency-services cost nor its attendant statutes direct the funds to be used for a legitimate, criminal-justice purpose; ... it is a tax that is facially unconstitutional”); Tex. Att'y Gen. Op. No. JC-0158 (“Court fees that are used for general purposes are characterized as taxes, and a tax imposed on a litigant ... violat[es] ... the constitution.”). And this means that article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) operate unconstitutionally every time that the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee is collected. See Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109 n.26; see also Johnson, — S.W.3d — — —, 2018 WL 1476275, at *4–5; Hernandez, — S.W.3d at — — —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *7.

<sup>14</sup> It may be helpful to look at the necessary inquiry that we must make in this case as a two-step process. First, we must ask whether article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) direct the funds collected from criminal defendants for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee to a particular “place.” Second, if article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) do so direct the funds, we must ask whether that particular “place” fulfills a legitimate criminal justice purpose. As noted above, article 102.011(a)(3) and (b)’s fatal flaw is that they do not actually state where the funds received from criminal defendants for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee are to be directed. See TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 102.011(a)(3), (b); Hernandez v. State, No. 01-16-000755-CR, — S.W.3d — — —, — — —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *6–7 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] Aug. 10, 2017, no pet. h.) (“The statute does not state where the $25 fee is to be directed.”); cf. Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 107–10 (after first noting “Consolidated Court Cost” fee statute directed funds collected to “abused children’s counseling” account and “comprehensive rehabilitation” account, then considering whether funds contained in either account are used for legitimate criminal justice purposes).

Further, even if “some of the money collected” for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee “may ultimately be spent on something that would [constitute] a legitimate criminal justice purpose,” this would not be “sufficient to create a constitutional application of the statute because the actual spending of the money is not what makes a fee a court cost.” Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109 n.26; see also Johnson, — S.W.3d — — —, 2018 WL 1476275, at *4 (“That funds can be used for a legitimate criminal-justice purpose does not satisfy the Salinas legal standard....”).

Thus, as the court of criminal appeals concluded in Salinas, article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) do not direct the funds received from criminal defendants for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee to be expended for a legitimate criminal justice purpose. 523 S.W.3d at 109–10, 109 n.26, 110 n.36; see also Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 517–18 (“[I]f [a] statute under which court costs are assessed ... provides for an allocation of ... court costs to be expended for legitimate criminal justice purposes, then the statute allows for a constitutional application that will not render the courts tax gatherers in violation of the [S]eparation of [P]owers clause.” (internal footnote omitted) ). Accordingly, I would hold that article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) are facially unconstitutional as they “allocate[ ] [the] funds” received for the “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee to the general revenue fund of either the county or the State and allow such money to be spent for purposes other than legitimate criminal justice purposes in violation of the Separation of Powers clause of the Texas Constitution.<sup>15</sup> See Salinas, 523 S.W.3d at 109–10 (“We cannot uphold the constitutionality of funding th[e] ['abused children's counseling'] account ... when all the funds in the account go to general revenue.”); Peraza, 467 S.W.3d at 518 n.17 (agreeing “court costs should [generally] relate to the recoupment of judicial resources”).

<sup>15</sup> For reasons expressed in previous cases, I would also hold that Texas Code of Criminal Procedure article 102.011(a)(3) and (b) are unconstitutional as applied to appellant because the statute violates his constitutional right to confrontation. See U.S. CONST. amend. VI; TEX. CONST. art. I, § 10 (right to confrontation); TEX. CODE CRIM. PROC. ANN. art. 1.05 (Vernon 2005); Castello v. State, No. 01-16-00742-CR, — S.W.3d at — — —, 2018 WL 2660520, at *7–13 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] June 5, 2018, pet. filed) (Jennings, J., concurring); London v. State, 526 S.W.3d 596, 605–12 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2017, pet. ref'd) (Jennings, J., dissenting). However, I recognize that this Court has already rejected the arguments presented by appellant. See, e.g., Castello, — S.W.3d at — — —, 2018 WL 2660520, at *5–7; Robles v. State, No. 01-16-00199-CR, 2018 WL 1056482, at *6 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] Feb. 27, 2018, pet. ref'd) (mem. op., not designated for publication); Buford v. State, No. 01-16-00727-CR, 2017 WL 6759199, at *6–7 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] Dec. 28, 2017, pet. ref'd) (mem. op., not designated for publication); Macias v. State, 539 S.W.3d 410, 421–24 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2017, pet. ref'd); London, 526 S.W.3d at 598–602, 604; see also Benge v. Williams, 472 S.W.3d 684, 738 (Tex. App.—Houston [1st Dist.] 2014) (Jennings, J., dissenting from denial of en banc reconsideration) (although “we are not free to disregard binding precedent,” as appellate court justices, “we ... are certainly free to point out any flaws in the reasoning of the [binding] opinions”), aff’d, 548 S.W.3d 466 (Tex. 2018); Jones v. State, 962 S.W.2d 96, 99 (Tex. App.—Houston 1997) (Taft, J., concurring) (noting although “we are bound by precedent ..., we are not gagged” by it), aff'd, 984 S.W.2d 254 (Tex. Crim. App. 1998); Precedent, BLACK'S LAW DICTIONARY (10th ed. 2014) (defining precedent as “a decided case that furnishes a basis for determining later cases involving similar facts or issues”).

*19 I would sustain appellant’s second issue and modify the trial court’s judgment to delete the $200 “Summoning Witness/Mileage” fee from the assessed court costs. See Cates v. State, 402 S.W.3d 250, 252 (Tex. Crim. App. 2013) (holding proper remedy when trial court erroneously includes amounts as court costs is to modify judgment to delete erroneous amounts); Hernandez, — S.W.3d at — — —, 2017 WL 3429414, at *7. Further, I continue to urge the legislature to reevaluate the fee system currently in place in light of the enormous, and potentially unjustified, burden it too often imposes “on the poorest members of society ensnared in Texas’ criminal justice system.”<sup>16</sup>

<sup>16</sup> Matt Clarke, Texas Criminal Court Fees are a Tax on Poor Defendants, PRISON LEGAL NEWS (Mar. 15, 2014), <https://www.prisonlegalnews.org/news/2014/mar/15/texas-criminal-court-fees-are-a-tax-on-poor-defendants/> (because “people who have been convicted of crimes elicit much less sympathy,” “the myriad of criminal court fees and their misuses will most likely continue unabated”); see also Eric Dexheimer, Hard-up Defendants Pay as State Siphons Court Fees for Unrelated Uses, STATESMAN (Sept. 20, 2012), <https://www.statesman.com/news/special-reports/hard-defendants-pay-state-siphons-court-fees-for-unrelated-u-ses/o Nyf6HCFKbA4NIq0UCLiRM/> (“‘We’re trying to squeeze more money from people who have a hard time getting jobs because they have a criminal record, or have mental illness problems or substance abuse problems’.... ‘These fees are a tax on the poor.’ ” (quoting executive director of the Texas Criminal Justice Coalition)).

All Citations

--- S.W.3d ----, 2018 WL 4138965